

Facts

- R You live in the Knowledge Economy, and information processing is the currency of the land. Your parents could live the American Dream without being a computer whiz, or even know how to send an attachment.
- R Want the American dream? Here's what it takes.
- R Over the next three-years (it passes quickly), the Internet will double the amount of available information.
- R Schools – and your future bosses - will rank you by your learning skills and creative thinking. You shut doors to promotions if you are just another snailer, with porous concentration. The question they ask is 'What do you know?'

Important Secrets

If you are still awake, there is an important secret revealed in the following few paragraphs. You might discover something important here for your future. We hope you check it out.

“When I was a young snot nose, my grandfather read to me from Rudyard Kipling’s Just So Stories,’ and in particular ‘The Elephant’s Child’. Kip wrote them in 1902, and clipped the Nobel for literature in 1907.

“I keep six honest serving men,
They taught me all I knew.
Their names are What? and Why?, and When? and How?,
and Where? and Who?” It ends like this.
“From the second she opens her eyes,
one-million Hows?, two-million Wheres?,
and seven-million Whys?”

Stuff They Don't Teach in School...

"In high school I was an 'A' student, hardly had to do much homework. I just aced my exams. And had plenty of socializing (time)."

"College started off good and then it stopped. I just couldn't keep up with the class assignments. They piled up day-by-day. I fell further behind, and after a month, I couldn't catch up."

Another college dropout interviewed said:

"I learned a new word – overwhelmed. Each prof acted as if his class was my only one. The homework to be ready for the next day, took me 'til Midnight. Every night."

Last one.

"Some instructors expected you to remember half the textbook. Crazy. I never learned that."

By a show of hands...

Q. How many believe it might help them ace high school and college, if you could read faster than you do?

Q. How many would put in a serious learning effort to save up to 2 hours a day of grinding?

Q. Raise your hand please. How many of you believe it would be a useful learning skill to read three books, articles and reports in the time it takes you now to finish - just one?

More Questions Please...

Q. How many think being able to read a test and questions three times – we call it Skimming, Scanning, and Screening – improves your odds compared to hardly finishing reading the exam only once?

Q. Hands please: how many feel doubling your memory for what you read and hear (lectures), could possibly help you ace school and exams?

Q. Last one. How many here believe it could be a little useful to capture the 'gist' (key points) of your studies quickly and permanently? We call it using Seven Smart Questions.

Who We Are, What We Do

Speedlearning100 teaches how to 3x your reading speed and 2x your memory.

We helped Evelyn Wood, the creator of speed reading, graduate her 2 million. Could you use these learning skills?

- One million were students, from age 13 through high school (SAT, ACT), through college and grad school. The other million was executives recommended by their companies.
- Included were the White House staffs of four US Presidents. Speed reading started in 1959.

Are you Caught Up?

Q. How many of you feel you could use 2 extra hours in a day?

Q. Who feels that being able to read and study ahead would give you a competitive advantage?

Q. What if you had a foolproof method for taking superior notes?

Q. What if you had The skills to do 3x the research you now do for papers and presentations?

CNN/Fortune magazine calls Speedlearning100 one of the “Secrets of Greatness” and a “Key Skill to Master Now.”

Stuff Colleges Hide From You

Anybody ever tell you 50% of students who start four-year colleges in the U.S. never graduate with their class? (U.S. Department of Education, Washington, D.C.)

⇒ Yeah, they either drop-out or flunk-out because they plain cannot keep up with their assignments. Maybe partying into the night, alcohol and pills add to it for some.

What Every Job Interviewer is Looking For

R What do you uniquely know?

R How long will it take you to learn stuff our (new) way?

R How fast can you read your new assignments?

R How well do you remember new things?

R What will you contribute to The company?

R How much information can you process in a short amount of time?
